

Women used to collect their hair in a decorative container called a hair receptacle. Sometimes they made mementos from the hair like this carefully braided circlet. This most likely would have been a winter activity for bored young ladies confined to the house.

This braided circlet was found ipressed in the pages of a book belonging to Ema Stewart Alt.